Nurturing children. Strengthening families. Building community.

From the Executive Director

As I reflect on the past year, I think of Imprints Cares' significant change and the impact we continue to have in our community. In the fall of 2022, we learned that we would have to move from Augsburg Community Center, where we had been located for 52 years. Through the generosity of the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation and Forsyth County, we now have two new locations to house our Ready for School and Expanded Learning teams, and are looking forward to creating a Family Success Center to further our reach in the community.

Throughout all this change, Imprints Cares Board of Directors and staff stayed focused on our mission: to nurture children for lifelong success. We all know that COVID-19 was traumatic for everyone, but young children were disproportionately impacted, especially those living in poverty. The dedicated Imprints Cares staff works to ensure that our programs provide the highest quality services to all families. Overall, during fiscal year 2022, we served more than 7,400 children and supported our local economy by providing essential wrap-around care to more than 1,200 employees, positively impacting 500 employers in Winston-Salem.

As I think of the year ahead, I am excited and focused on our vision: to unlock the full potential of children and their families for success in school and life. Our pledge to this community is to promote educational and health equity by embracing cultural diversity and continuously seeking to create safe and inclusive environments where children can learn, grow, and thrive. We can't do this alone, and I am grateful to all our partners who share our vision and understand the true meaning of collective impact.

Sincerely,

Claudia Barnett
Executive Director

Advocacy

Imprints Cares advocates for children and families by providing a full spectrum of evidence-based and research-backed programming. However, our advocacy efforts extend well beyond our programming.

- We advance education campaigns to ensure our community is well-informed.
- We develop strategic partnerships and coalitions, collaborating with members of the community and other constituents dedicated to the promotion of positive early childhood development.
- We influence local, regional, and national policies and programs that support early childhood development.
- Imprints Cares staff participate in thought leadership discussions within and beyond the community we serve, learning from and sharing best practices that support families and children.

Trauma Resilient Communities

Led by Crossnore, the Center for Trauma Resilient Communities (TRC) is a collaborative project with the goal of developing a community-engaged strategic plan that reduces the impact of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) and creates a more trauma-resilient Winston-Salem through community participation and community-engaged research. Imprints Cares is actively engaged in this partnership by serving on the TRC Advisory Council and the TRC Research Steering Committee. Two Imprints Cares staff have completed a comprehensive TRC train-the-trainer course and will work collaboratively to promote and embed the science of trauma-informed practice throughout our community.

iQ Community Labs Partnership

Imprints Cares and Atrium Health Wake Forest Baptist (AHWFB) have a collaborative partnership through Innovation Quarter Community Labs. This partnership aims to utilize the global network of Innovation Quarter to bring new partners and resources to help validate Imprints Cares' multi-generational model, which supports children and families to build equity at a population health level.

Research

Imprints Cares is actively engaged in research throughout and beyond our community, with the goal of expanding and improving our evidence-based programs for families. Here are two ongoing efforts.

Young Moms Study

This collaborative study team involves representatives from Imprints Cares, Atrium Health Wake Forest Baptist (AHWFB), and Wake Forest School of Medicine. The Young Moms Program (YMP) will provide health-to-home services for young moms (ages 14-21) giving birth at the AHWFB Birth Center. The YMP is part of the evidence-based Pediatric Parenting Connection (PPC) program at Imprints Cares. The study aims to:

1. Provide high-risk young moms at least six months of post-natal health and parenting support;
2. Enhance knowledge of child development among high-risk young moms;
3. Increase high-risk young moms' usage of preventive health and parenting behaviors and decreasing their usage of reactive and negative behaviors;
4. Ensure newborns have safe and nurturing environments with caregivers that are responsive to their needs; and
5. Improve coordination and service delivery within the health system and across systems.

Brenner FIT Food Security Study

Imprints Cares Ready for School Family, Friends, and Neighbors (FFN) program, in partnership with Atrium Health's Brenner FIT, conducted a food security study to assess the nutritional environment in the homes of informal care providers. FFN-enrolled care providers were interviewed and offered resources and education to improve nutritional offerings. The study concluded that food insecurity was not as prevalent as predicted in both caregivers' and parents' homes. Both caregivers and parents had concerns about children undereating and desired more education on healthy meals.

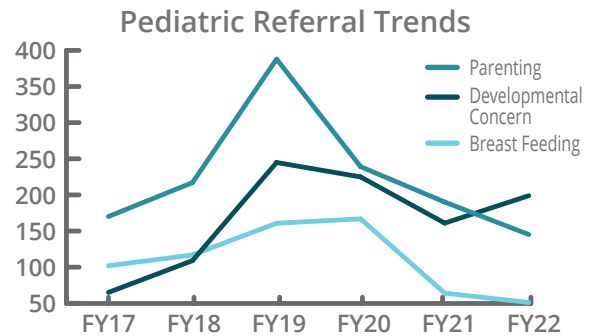

Ready for School

Pediatric Parenting Connections

for families with children ages prenatal to 5 years

Pediatric Parenting Connections (PPC) places highly-qualified family educators into pediatric practices to provide evidence-based education and support for parents of young children. PPC provides age-appropriate developmental screenings for children, depression screenings for parents, and referrals to appropriate community resources and providers for families.

This graph depicts a historical trend of referral types. It is important to note that for the first time in the history of PPC there were more referrals for developmental concerns, which may be linked to the negative affect the global pandemic had on many young children.

SAMPLE CASE

Young mom Kalya is struggling to breastfeed her son, Kyle.

Kyle's pediatrician refers Kalya to a PPC-certified breastfeeding educator.

After in-person support and follow-up, Kalya successfully breastfeeds Kyle.

Outcomes-Focused and Evidence-Based

Imprints Cares has validated the outcomes of PPC over 13 years. At the core of PPC is the international evidence-based Parents as Teachers (PAT) model. PPC impact is tracked with qualitative and quantitative metrics including:

- Indicators of normal child development, ACES, and toxic stress.
- Preventive health: breastfeeding, well-child checkups, vaccinations, etc.
- Outputs: Referrals made/kept, parent satisfaction, parent participation in workshops/group meetings
- Changes in parental behavior.

Parents as Teachers

for families with children ages prenatal to 5 years

Parents as Teachers (PAT) is an international evidence-based program that offers families in-home visits up to twice a month. During these visits, family educators provide parenting tips and learning activities to help parents prepare their children for school. Home visits, which can be made in English or Spanish, create family-centered engagement opportunities that:

- Improve parent understanding at each age and stage of a child's development.
- Promote good parenting habits by connecting with parents in a familiar environment — their own home.
- Increase positive parent-child interactions.

Imprints Cares is recognized by the national PAT office as a Blue Ribbon Affiliate. This means that we exceed the PAT Essential Requirements and the PAT Quality Standards.

for in-home childcare providers caring for children ages birth to 5 years

- Developmental screenings for children
- Two in-home visits monthly from a trained provider educator
- Evidence-based support and training
- Resources, books, and engaging activities
- Play & Learn Group invitations
- Home safety tips

Book Babies for families with children ages birth to 5 years

Book Babies combines literacy coaching and the delivery of age-appropriate books during quarterly home visits to promote early language and literacy skills in young children. Book babies are recruited each year as a cohort before they are four months old. Participating Book Babies will each have a home library of 100+ books by the time they enter kindergarten. What makes this program so special is that each cohort grows and learns together over the first five years of their life and parents develop a strong peer network.

Findings from a randomized control trial (2020) indicate that more Book Babies parents are engaging in literacy-promoting activities compared to parents in the two control groups, and children in the Book Babies group show stronger early literacy skills, especially in Spanish-speaking families.

Reach Out and Read for families with children ages birth to 5 years

Reach Out and Read (ROR) gives young children a foundation for success by incorporating books into pediatric care centers and encouraging families to read aloud together. Studies show that Reach Out and Read improves language ability in young children. Additionally, participating families are more likely to attend well-child checkups, while pediatricians who participate in ROR report experiencing less stress and reduced occurrences of burnout.

12,000+ books were prescribed to 6,604
children during well-child visits.

Growing to serve.

2022 marked a year of change for Imprints Cares. Through the generosity of the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, we relocated our Ready for School staff to their new offices off Reynolda Road, and with support from the Forsyth County Commissioners, we purchased a 21,000 sq. ft. building, which will be the future home of Imprints Cares Family Success Center. Upfit of the new Family Success Center will begin in late 2023. We look forward to expanding programs and community collaborations.

As we grow, we remain committed to providing the highest quality programming. In early 2023, our Expanded Learning Family Engagement Team will complete Triple P certification, an evidence-based, school-aged positive parenting model. We are hopeful that our Pediatric Parenting Connections (PPC) program will expand into Novant Health and into the Atrium Health Enterprise. We are also looking forward to entering into a 5-year partnership with Boston Thurmond Community Network, where we will provide Book Babies and other support services. As we strategically plan for sustained growth, we rely heavily on community partnerships and the trusting relationships of the families we serve to guide our shared vision.
